Cookie (cookie) usage:

Cookies ("cookies") are short text files that are placed on your computer's browser by the websites you visit.

Cookies do not connect to your system and do not harm your files. Cookies can be "persistent" or "temporary" cookies. A persistent cookie is stored by the browser for a fixed period of time, provided that it is not deleted by the user before that time, but a temporary cookie is not stored by the browser and is automatically deleted when the browser is closed. In order to make our website as efficient as possible, we also use cookies. Cookies enable a website to recognise returning users and allow us to collect information about our users' behaviour, such as the country in which you have joined our website, the browser software and operating system you are using, your IP address, the pages you have viewed on our website, and the features you have used. We do not collect personally identifiable information unless you voluntarily provide it. We use this information to improve our website, to analyse our traffic and for our advertising strategy. If you do not consent to the setting of a cookie, you can do so by means of the settings (disable, revoke) in your browser. In this case, this may limit or prevent the use of certain services.

Information about advertising:

External service providers, such as Google, display advertisements using cookies, based on the user's previous visits to the website. The DART cookie used by Google enables Google and its partners to serve ads to users based on their visits to your site and other places on the Internet.

Users may opt out of the use of the DART cookie by visiting the advertising opt-out page. (You may also opt out of cookies from third-party providers by visiting the Network Advertising Initiative opt-out page.) On this site, Google provides paid links to visitors to this website. Visitors may opt out of some (if not all) of these cookies by visiting the Network Advertising Initiative opt-out page at www.networkadvertising.org/managing.

What is a DoubleClick DART cookie?

The DoubleClick DART cookie is used by Google for advertising on the websites of its partners, such as websites that display AdSense ads or participate in Google-approved advertising networks. When users visit a partner website and either view an advertisement or click on an advertisement, a cookie may be placed on that end-user's browser. The data collected from such cookies is used by the system to help advertisers better serve and manage ads on their websites and on the web.
